Our children often talk about these characteristics [7 Wonders of Learning] and seek to focus on one for a while. We try to encourage them try using these words at home too and think they are a fantastic group of ideas to aspire towards.

The road safety sessions definitely came into effect at home - that clearly made an impression!

Violet knows the zones . And likes to remind us what zones we are in too ;)

Florence is showing great concern and interest in recycling and helping the planet

The children have had a lovely wide offer in relation to safety and we are grateful that they have had broad experiences

Nina shows aspirational by wanting to learn new things and committing to it.

We have noticed a very focussed, reflective and problem-solving attitude at home. We also are grateful our son's naturally inquisitive nature has been championed and celebrated at school.

She loves the PANTS song and is aware of what it means.

We have been very (pleasantly) surprised by our son's online safety aptitude and vocabulary. As mentioned road safety also made an impact.

As a result of whole school circle time, my daughter says she has become more confident to speak and feels she is listened to.

Jim often describes how he's feeling using zones of regulation as descriptors.

She wants to understand why things are happening . She wants to be involved and loves solving problems

We love the lessons of tolerance and respect and often hear terminology used in home discussions that is very helpful and support our son's development.

I go to netball club and netball tournaments. I am also a school Sports Ambassador.
These opportunities have made me feel more confident.

Going to How Hill allowed me to experience things that I have never done before.

I get to be with my friends [at school clubs] and make some new friends.

School trips help me feel more independent.

School opportunities help our mental health. I feel happy doing things I enjoy with my friends.

I can choose what I play with in Busy Time.
(discussed independence and freedom)

Having lots clubs to choose from means I get to try new things.

NHS Day helped us learn if we are in trouble and what to do about it.

When visitors come to school, it helps our learning feel more real and gives us ideas of jobs.

School trips help you have fun outside of school.

Having visitors in helps us learn more about a topic, such as Anglo Saxons.

Forest School teaches us to care about plants and trees. It helps us enjoy nature.

Going to sports clubs helps our teamwork and problem solving.

Bike time and Bikeability has helped me with riding a bike. I know how to be safe.
